AR AIS ARÍS

“Collaborating with the Galway Arts Centre on the Disquiet Nights late night party following on from the art exhibition opening was a significant success from our perspective and the collaboration outcomes were greater than the sum of their parts. Not only were we able to attract over 350 attendees to this event, the input we received from the artist Martina O’Brien, as well as having access to some of her imagery for use in projections, allowed us to reach a higher level of event production and provided a more immersive experience for attendees.

Galway Arts Centre and Martina also brought new people into our network, meaning we could be more ambitious in our approach to programming and space design, which was an excellent opportunity for us as a collective and has given us the opportunity to prove we can successfully deliver productions at a more significant scale.”

'Disquiet Nights' Galway Arts Centre's Late Night Programme

“Disquiet Nights offers a space for engagement with a variety of work from DJ sets to tarot reading, often finding ways in which Irish artists locate themselves in more international practices and conversations. It is meaningfully contributing to the rejuvenation of Galway’s nightlife, slowly cementing itself as a critical part of the city’s creative heartbeat. I’ve been so excited by the offerings thus far and have enjoyed the spontaneous conversation and connections the events have created. I hope that Disquiet Nights might continue to inspire, excite, and illuminate its audiences, introducing them to an expansive world of practices which often get overlooked in respect to creative cultures.’
